We’re excited to roll out our new Enhanced Digital Version (EDV) of Crops & Soils magazine, starting with this issue. Simply log in with your certification username and password at www.agronomy.org/publications/crops-and-soils and let us know what you think. Or you can access it on your smart phone or tablet starting with the November–December 2013 issue by downloading the Crops & Soils app. It’s free, so be sure to look for the app later this fall in the Apple, Google, or Amazon stores so that you can take the magazine out into the field or anywhere else for that matter.

The EDV of Crops & Soils magazine offers several new benefits, including:

- Interactive enhancements to stories such as video, audio, slideshows, animation, and surveys.
- Exclusive content found only in the EDV, including self-study CEUs
- Portability—with the Crops & Soils app (coming later this fall), you can read the magazine on your smart phone or tablet
- Ease of navigation—flip through pages just like print, click directly to an article, and zoom in and out
- The ability to share pages with colleagues or clients via email, Facebook, LinkedIn, and Twitter
- Robust search technology allowing you to key in on the articles/topics that appeal to you

In addition to the EDV, every certificant and subscriber to Crops & Soils magazine should be receiving an email supplement (with news and CEUs) that is sent out on the months opposite the print edition (September, November, January, March, May, and July). If you’re not receiving it, please let us know.

Log on today and let me know how you like the new format. I can be reached at mmandelbaum@sciencesocieties.org.

By Mark Mandelbaum
Director of Publications and Meetings

doi:10.2134/cs2013-46-5-1