Nagel was the top individual judge in the contest and Seubert carried off second place individual honors.

By winning the 15th Region 3 Soils Contest, Purdue will compete in the national collegiate soils event next May at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg. The Ohio State team, which won third place, will also represent the region in the National contest.

Teams from Illinois, Wisconsin, and Ohio competed against the Purdues. Wisconsin State University at Stevens Point was host for the regional contest, held near Clam Lake, Wisconsin, on October 15.

Yesterday! Today! Tomorrow?

David J. Belz
R. R. 1 Bulger, Pa. 15019

There are many, many fields
where a farmer's crops would yield a living.
Yesterday.

But today they're planting houses
for umpteen moms, their spouses
and the kids.
Houses where the cornfield's tassels waved
in summer sunlight.

And they've also built a driveway to enter a brand new shiny shopping center
where the hay and grain swayed
in summer breezes.

Well, you know, this building boom
has to have a lot of room.
So 'dozers shove the earth aside, committing pedogenicide.