I am submitting herewith the list of 92 new soil series names that have been established since the last report was made to the Association. Of these, 23 have been reported by Dr. T. Rigg from New Zealand; 18 from Australia, of which 11 have been reported by Dr. L. J. H. Teakle of Perth in West Australia, and 7 by Mr. J. K. Taylor of the Waite Institute in Adelaide, South Australia; while 51 series have been established during the year in the soil survey work in the United States. Three of the series established in New Zealand have been given names that are duplicates of names already established in the United States. Two other potential duplications were discovered by the committee and a change was made in the name for new series, thus avoiding the duplication. Letters from men in soil survey work in China and in Africa report that new series are being discovered and that as soon as the names are officially established they will be reported for listing. All of the soil survey organizations throughout the world are cooperating in listing the series names and in the endeavors to avoid duplication. It is hoped that some day this work may be supplemented by full descriptions of every series.
